Connecticut Renaissance Faire Hosts “School Day” Event for Connecticut Students

Special day for Connecticut young people allows them to experience life in the time of knights, ladies, serfs and kings

HEBRON, CT (July 24, 2008) – The Connecticut Renaissance Faire is offering a special “School Day” on Monday Sep 29, 2008. This annual event has been set aside solely for educators and students to experience the magic of the Renaissance period. This is an educational experience for the students where they can observe history first hand surrounded by their peers.

During the Faire’s School Day event students are encouraged to take part in every aspect of the Faire. Students won’t just watch actors in a play; they will help form the stories that play out on the faire grounds during The Faire, located on the Hebron Lions Fairgrounds on 347 Gilead St. (Route 85) in Hebron, Connecticut, is a living history recreation where professional actors interact with students and involve them in a day filled with so much fun and excitement they’ll forget they are learning.

For more information about the Connecticut Renaissance Faire’s School Day program, parents and teachers can log onto the Faire’s web-site at www.ctfaire.com or by emailing Michelle Renihan, the Faire’s education coordinator at michelle@ctfaire.com.
